POSITION DESCRIPTION

Doane Advisory Services and Farm Journal are seeking a Director of Market Research to lead the development of a market research practice built on the foundation of Farm Journal's broad dataset and deep access to farmers and during a time of significant investment and rapid growth.

Skills/Professional Experience

- You have strong fundamental market research analysis skills, with a strong preference to experience in agriculture. An advanced degree is preferred, but significant past experience is a good substitute.
- You have command of qualitative and quantitative market research tools and methods, including advanced statistics software and survey tools.
- You have significant experience in all phases of market research and management – product launches, pricing, positioning, channel and promotions strategy, etc.
- You can distill all business questions and challenges into an analytical test.
- You have a deep well of relationships in and knowledge of the agribusiness.
- You have a vision and excitement for building a market research practice.
- You know how to lead others. You will be a person the organization looks to as a role model and a guide of our culture.
- You know how to get the best out of others.
- You possess high emotional intelligence.
- You present well as the face of our organization before the client.
- You deliver what you say you will deliver on time and at the highest quality.
- You want to create a high-energy, creative, fun and analytical culture.
- You have experience building businesses.
- You can travel up to 20% of the time.
